ICGR 2020 Pre-Conference Workshop

3rd International Conference on Gender Research
2 - 3 April 2020, University of Reading, UK

Date: Wednesday 1st April 2020
Time: 10:00 - 12:00

Preparing and Writing a Paper for Publication in a Journal

Led by Dr. Chris Turner, University of Reading, UK

This workshop will consider the following: (i) thinking about the most appropriate journal for publishing work; (ii) identifying the key issues to consider when preparing an article (e.g. what topics might journal editors wish to see published in their journal); (iii) writing an article, especially thinking about its structure and the length of the article; (iv) clarifying what referees look for in an article which might potentially be published.

There will also be some discussion about the questions which need to be considered prior to submission to a journal editor; i.e. is the proposed article about some empirical research both relevant and up-to-date? Does the proposed article about theoretical ideas place sufficient emphasis on originality and critical thinking? Does the proposed article explain how the research fits into an existing, wider body of knowledge? Does the proposed article show awareness of current policy developments in the area?

This workshop will briefly address the advantages and disadvantages related to presenting work at a conference. There will be opportunities to read and discuss in small groups, examples of different types of publication from Chris’s own experience.

Finally, there will be a focus on disseminating research publications on social media especially using blogs, Twitter and Facebook.

Learning outcomes:
This workshop is mainly targeted at doctoral students who are keen to get their work published in reputable journals

Workshop Facilitator
Dr. Chris Turner Chris has worked in two separate HE institutions for about twenty-nine years. He has published a variety of articles in the field of educational leadership and management, which specifically examine the key issues facing middle leaders in education in schools. He is currently a referee for three significant journals, one of which deals with professional development in education while the other two deal with general issues concerned with leadership and management.
