

Academic Authors' Boot Camp for Early Career Faculty

Having work published in a reputable academic journal has become a key to most university positions and promotions. A list of published papers/articles has come to largely define the capability of a university teacher or researcher.

The problem which early careers academics face is that normally little if any help and advice is provided to those wanting to start their publishing career and thus the task of getting published can seem enormous.

This is the reason why the Academic Authors' Boot Camp was devised.

Writing academic papers is a craft skill and it is not easy to understand how it is done unless one is fully involved in the actual process itself. For this reason, an Academic Authors' Boot Camp has been devised which involves participants working on a paper over a period of time. The Boot Camp consists of four 2-hour bi-weekly webinars (spaced two weeks apart) and between each session there will be work on a paper to be undertaken by the participating academics.

Feedback will be provided to the participants before each webinar.

In becoming a published academic there are four main sets of issues which have to be addressed. And these are:

Publishing opportunities available to the academic researcher.

This section addresses different types of research and will highlight the routes which are most likely to bring results to early career academics.

The skill of writing academic English.

Here guidelines are introduced which inform participants about the task of writing in the required way and to the required standard to be acceptable to academic journals.

An understanding of the academic publishing world.

The world of academic publishing is complex, and it is important for academics to know their way around it.

Dealing with an academic journal.

Research has to be matched to an appropriate journal. The Guide to Authors has to be followed, Revisions are often required, etc.

During the 8 weeks participants may be in contact with the facilitator on issues arising out of the development of their own paper. It is important to note that this Boot Camp is much more than an academic writing course as the skill in writing is only part of what is needed to become a published academic.

The Boot Camp will be conducted through Zoom sessions which will normally be of a 2-hour duration during which group participation will be required.

The cost of participating in this Boot Camp is £200. The first Boot Camp session is scheduled to begin on September 19, 2022. Any queries should be directed to dan.remenyi@academic-publishing.org

Timetable for the Boot Camp

Session One: September 19, 2022, 14:00 GMT+1 to 16:00

Session Two: October 3, 2022, 14:00 GMT+1 to 16:00

Session Three: October 17, 2022, 14:00 GMT+1 to 16:00

Session Four: October 31, 2022, 14:00 GMT to 16:00

To register use the link :

Webinars – Academic Conferences International \(academic-conferences.org\)

Boot Camp facilitator

Dr Dan Remenyi has had authored or co-authored more than 60 papers and 30 books in the past 25 years. According to Harzing.com he has an H-Index of 37. He is published in the UK in the top 4 journals in his field. His books range from research texts to traditional textbooks, to how-to-books, as well as biography. Some of his books have been translated into Chinese, Japanese and Romanian. He has been a visiting professor at seven different universities in four countries over the past 20 years. He holds a BSocSc, MBA and PhD.